EINSTEIN VERSUS MAGNES

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

Theology or truth—which shall prevail at the Hebrew University? The reputed resignation from the Board of the Hebrew University of Albert Einstein, noted scientist and father of the relativity hypothesis, because of some differences of opinion with Dr. Judah L. Magnes, dean of the University, has raised an important question, which should be settled at once. Because Dr. Chajes, Biblical scholar, imbued with the modern spirit of criticism and research, who cherishes unorthodox opinions about the Bible, was rejected by Magnes for a professorship of the Bible at the Hebrew University, Einstein severed his connections with the University. Magnes himself is a graduate of the Hebrew Union College who has studied Biblical criticism and appreciates its value. Yet despite that, he rejected Chajes because Chajes cherished his own views about the Bible. How account for this unusual attitude?

It is an amazing thing that the chair of Biblical studies has had no occupant at the Hebrew University, that at a university in the new Palestine, built by the descendants of those who wrote the Bible, the Bible itself has not been studied. The crisis precipitated by the resignation of Einstein, Magnes has attempted to avert. Sympathetic as he personally is to Biblical criticism, he hesitated to appoint a modern scholar as professor of the Bible, because he did not want to alienate from the University the militant orthodox elements, who regard modern biblical research as satanic and who would have excommunicated the Hebrew University had one of its professors taught unorthodox views. Magnes did not want the Hebrew University to become the centre of controversy and polemic. It was too young. It needed the support of all factions in Jewry—the radicals, conservatives and the orthodox. Hence he avoided making an issue which would alienate the orthodox party. Magnes did not want a Jewish fundamentalist and modernist feud to weaken the University. So he postponed selecting a man to teach the Bible. When interviewed last summer, he stated that his board had authorized him to go ahead with the appointment of a scientific student of Bible. Why then did he reject Chajes? Evidently he fears the orthodox elements.

Laudable as are Magnes' efforts to safeguard the University's financial prospects, yet I believe he has erred. A university is after all dedicated to truth, to research and to learning. It dare not be subordinated to theology. Its faculty must be free to pursue truth without let or restriction. No theological chains, no doctrinal shackles should be hung on university professors. The Hebrew University must not be allowed to degenerate into a theological institution, hampered and harassed by the orthodox views of church prelates. The Hebrew University must remain loyal to the university ideal. If Magnes yields now to the orthodox militants, we will find that soon they will be objecting to the teaching of the sciences, for they too contradict and conflict with orthodox dogma, and before we know it the Hebrew University will be harassed worse than are the universities in Tennessee. Magnes should appoint Chajes. If he wants to satisfy the orthodox party, let him appoint a professor who

QUESTIONS: QUESTIONABLE AND UNANSWERABLE

Ever since we ensconced ourselves in the rarefied atmosphere of the editorial writer's perch we have exercised to the limit our prerogative of handing out opinions and comments and disquisitions on all manner of subjects. It occurs to us that it might not be unfitting for us for once to drop the role of omniscience and instead of vouchsafing wisdom and positive statements, turn on our readers and ask them some questions. We should prefer the answers ungarnished. If this questionaire meets with success, we shall be encouraged on further occasions to disclose our ignorance and seek enlightenment from our readers.

(Q.). What has become of the "Ezras Noshim"? This organization has provided more comfortable berths for honorary officials than any other society in the city. Incidentally it has to its credit the organization of the Old Folks' Home and the Jewish hospital. Can't it come to life and take hold of the Jewish basket ball team and make a winner of it?

(Q.). What do the Toronto Official Zionists mean when they speak of the "Central Division"? Have they forgotten that the divisional system has long been abolished in Canadian Zionism? Do they mean to emphasize that there is a Central Division instead of a Central Union?

(Q.). Why do not Toronto Jewish organizations see to it that there is a bazaar at least once a week? The practice of having them bi-weekly is unsatisfactory. Merchants love to have ladies call on them for donations.

(Q.). Why does the sanctioning of the eating of pork-products on the Day of Atonement entitle a creed to designate itself as "Liberal Judaism"?

(Q.). Why does the Canadian Zionist Federation always insist on its executive directors wearing beards? And why does not Mr. Louis Fitch fall in line with the other two vice-presidents of the Federation and also cover his chin with hirsute decoration?

(Q.). How many constituent organizations form the membership of the "Council of Jewish Women"?

(Q.). What has become of the new synagogue on the Hill?

(Q.). Was it the "Law of Compensation" at work in the Toronto Zionist office when the abbreviated secretary was appointed to collaborate with the president of the Zionist Council and the president of Hadassah—both the latter resembling Saul who towered head and shoulders above his fellows?

(Q.). When will executives of Jewish organizations realize that when they engage salaried officials to direct their activities the officials are entitled to proper co-operation and a decent opportunity to make good?

(Q.). How do the guardians of our kosher meat manage to get along such a considerable while without a fight?

(Q.). Who pays for the cuts of all these young Jewish chaps who manage to get their faces in the English press every time a few of them get together somewhere for a chat or "schmoos"?

(Q.). What has become of those beautiful pictures of the kindergarten of the Talmud Torah, which used to feature all the write-ups of the Talmud Torah?

"We have too many abstract formulae about humanity and too little common sense for solving concrete social problems. But the "racial purity" and the "racial inferiority" behind such books as McDougall's "Is America Safe for Democracy?" Chamberlain's "Foundations of Nineteenth Century Civilization," Grant's "The Passing of the Great Race," Wiggam's "The New Decalogue of Science," Gould's "America a Family Matter," and East's "Mankind at the Crossroads" are bunk pure and simple. If these United States wish to restrict immigration to "Nordics" or to this or that political group, why not say so and be done with it? To bolster up racial prejudice or a Nordic or a Puritan complex by false and misleading inference drawn from "intelligence tests" or from pseudo-biology and ethnology, is to throw away science and fall back on the mentality of primitive savagery. Evolution produced a human brain, our only remarkable inheritance. Nothing else counts. Body is simply brain's servant. Treat the body right, of course; no brain can function well without good service. But why worry more about the looks, colour and clothes of the servant than the service it performs?"—From George A. Dorsey's great book, "Why We Behave Like Human Beings."

Two pieces of constructive work recently undertaken by Federation under the executive directorship of Joseph A. Woolf point to the fact that slowly but surely the Toronto Jewish community is moving ahead a little in the matter of charity and welfare dispensation. One plan is the organization of Junior Federation; the other that of the Council of Jewish Social Service.

Junior Federation, now conducting a membership campaign in the high schools, is building for the future. Its members will be led into an enlightened attitude toward communal obligations while they are young. For every member of the Junior Federation who learns now to give his mite to some worthy cause there will be a man willing to do his share, a man who has grown into the habit of helping the poor and who does not need to be campaigned, cajoled or cussed into it by some one on a team. When these high school girls and boys are men and women they will take as a matter of course what many of their parents consider new charity tricks to-day in Toronto.

In the Council of Jewish Social Service are represented the recognized and accepted Jewish communal organizations and its purpose is round-table discussion. The aims are to know what local problems are and what other communities are doing with theirs; to spread propaganda for the better information of the public and members of each communal organization; to establish co-operation between the organizations in the Council. The work will be carried on through committees. They will talk about the problems of the various agencies in the Council, standards and methods, the support and discussion of studies of communal needs, the obtaining of greater publicity for the work of the agencies, the avoidance of duplication or conflict of financial efforts.

A specimen problem for consideration by the Council is this: Federation spends more than $40,000 on family welfare work. Another $15,000 or $20,000 is raised and spent through individuals and organizations. It is known as a matter of experience that other cities more prosperous than Toronto and with less of a poverty problem find it necessary to spend from $1.50 to $2 per capita on family relief work. For Toronto that would mean from $60,000 to $80,000. This Jewish community is already spending $60,000, all told. But how?

The Council hopes later to go into the whole question of Jewish education with a view to bringing a little order into the present chaotic situation.

The Council is not so concerned now with how member agencies get their financial support as it is with the work the member agency does or tries to do. Ultimately the Council hopes to show and to convince the Toronto Jewish community that such a continuous round of bazaars, theatre nights, "charity" dances, raffles and campaigns as 1926 produced is sheer waste. These methods are considered archaic and absurd and have been discarded long ago by progressive communities.

The aims of the Council are not revolutionary. They merely make up a programme recognized for years elsewhere as being reasonably progressive. This programme will not be adopted with ease or dispatch in Toronto because of too much stiff-neckedness among many of who have some say. But it deserves commendation and very best wishes for a useful life.

A Religious Teacher's View of Blasphemy

By Rabbi Ferdinand Isserman

What then is the bible, you ask? The bible is the spiritual biography of Israel. It contains the record of how a people's God-idea grew and expanded. It reveals Israel in the early stages of its history conceiving of a god, very much like the god of their neighbours—a god of the storm, a god of war, a god who dwells in a cave or hides in a tree, a god who is vindictive and cruel, a god who wants incense and sacrifice, a corporeal god with hands and feet, only Israel's god, indifferent to other nations. But it shows that people shedding these primitive notions, emancipating itself from the superstition of its environment, casting away the old notions of God, and groping its way upward and higher till the god who asks for the death of the prisoners of war became the god "gracious and merciful," and the god who hardens the heart of Pharaoh becomes the god who wants swords beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks, the God who says, "When thy enemy be thirsty give him water, and when he be hungry, give him food." The bible is a history of a people developing its idea of god. It is, therefore, inaccurate to say that the god of the Jews is a god of vengeance, or that the God of the Jews is a narrow, national God. The God of Israel was conceived to be a god of vengeance, and was conceived to be the god of one nation. But that god-idea was abandoned and when the prophets are through with the god-idea, God has become the god of the universe, who rules it with love and righteousness and justice. The God of the Jews is a universal God of peace and justice and love—that is the accurate way of putting things.

When our Rationalist friends of this city speak of the God of the Jews—and I call them friends even though they seem to have attacked my religion, for I still believe them to be children of God, made in his image, children of the same father in heaven—they are in error, though I believe sincerely so, and they do not understand at all the modern attitude towards the bible. For the refutation of the crude attributes of God, which are in the bible, is also in the bible—and the God of Isaiah is as much the God of the bible as the god of Genesis, Chapter II. Our rationalists here and throughout the world who have marched out of the ranks of Christianity and of Judaism, because they could not accept the god of the bible, have done so only because they were taught that the bible was an infalliable book, every word of which was literally true. Had they been taught the bible in the light of modern scholarship and research, had they been shown that the bible is not a book but a library, containing the spiritual history of a people, its growth from the primitive to sublimer views extending over a period of centuries, they, I believe, would never have left the fold of religion. I personally believe, that the agnostic Ingersoll, whose arraignment of religion was severe and was more blasphemous than anything published in this city—I believe that had he been taught the attitude towards the bible held by liberal scholars, preachers and teachers the world over, the attitude held by Theodore Parker, the attitude held today by H. Fosdick, of New York, and Dean Inge, of London, he would never have become the foe of religion.

It is the orthodox view of an infalible book which is crumbling throughout the world, and with which our friends in this city are at variance. I shall not believe that Rationalists are wicked people. I believe that they can be just as sincere in opposing religion as I can be in advocating it. The world has had some great agnostics, who yet were kind and decent people. Anatole France, the great French littérateur, may have been in that group, and so perhaps also G. Bernard Shaw. Yet no one would consider these gigantic figures as criminals and felons. I believe that a man who believes in a god, who feels himself part of a great process, can be much happier than the agnostic or the atheist—can lead a fuller, richer and more powerful life. But to call the latter a knave or a scoundrel is unjust and is irreligious.

Nor do I believe, my friends, that the pillars of religion are endangered when a small group of men in a community begin hammering away at them. We must not become hysterical nor be stampeded when a group of iconoclasts begin to shoot their critical arrows at organized religion. In its long history, religion has frequently been attacked and frequently been put on the defensive. At times these attacks were justified. Religious institutions had become too haughty and too arrogant, had abused their powers and had forgotten their spiritual consecretion. The prophets attacked the organized religion of their day. The founder of Christianity attacked the organized religion of his day. Luther attacked the organized religion of his day—so did Hus, and so did Bruno, and so did the Waldensians, and so did the Puritans, and so did Spinoza and Galileo, and so did the innumerable martyrs mentioned in Foxe's "Book of Martyrs." These men from the standpoint of their age were blasphemers, some of them paid with their lives for their courage in attacking religion, and posterity has raised them from their martyred graves to the highest and noblest places. But because these men attacked the religion of their day and the frenzied passions of churchmen and masses brought some to their premature deaths, is no indication that they were not men of the highest calibre.

Organized religion need not fear the attacks of unbelievers. It has capable spokesmen. It has excellent organization. It has public opinion and the press to aid it. It has funds at its disposal. It has printing presses and authors and thinkers who are ready to break lances in its behalf. It will weather all attacks. It may purge itself when necessary, but it will endure, and no pious people need fear any one publication or any one group of heretics.

It is not to the advantage of religious leaders to suppress the thoughts of unbelievers. As a religious teacher, I want to know what the opponents of religion are thinking and doing. I want to know their point of view, that I may meet it. I do not want them to propagate their views by stealth. That is how mischief is bred and fostered. I want them to be in the open, where they can be answered and refuted. Suppression leads to festering, dangerous sores. Expression clears the atmosphere. After a thunderstorm, the skies are cleared; so after the thunder against religion has expressed itself all is well. The Londoners have recognized that, and in Hyde Park every fad has a chance to express itself, and unlimited freedom of speech and thought prevail. Much steam is exploded there, and passes into the atmosphere and no one is harmed. Attempt to suppress that steam, and explosion may occur. I believed in the old British notion of untrammelled liberty of speech and press. I want to give the foes of religion the same privilege that I cherish—the privilege to express their views about religious matters. I shall not fear their attacks on my faith. It is a Rock of Ages—it has survived centuries of storm and stress and it shall not be destroyed overnight. I want to meet in the open those who attack it, and I believe it can be defended.

One of the black marks against all organized religion is the record of persecution in its name. Thousands of lives have been martyrs to their blasphemies. The pages of history are red with the victims of that levitical legislation. The blasphemers of one age become the prophets of the next. Bruno, burned for blasphemy by the dominant church, became the founder of a new philosophy. Baruch Spinoza, barred from the synagogue, was later called the god-intoxicated man. Religions appear weak when they call upon the secular arm to enforce their authority or to strengthen their faith. Nay, furthermore, religious leaders are most irreligious when they prosecute or persecute others in the name of religion.

In Jewish history, the penalty of death for blasphemy gave way to excommunication, and in modern times it is practically ignored. And that, it seems, is the best way to treat it. I would not go one step out of my way to punish a blasphemer, though I would go far to win him over to a religious point of view. The old god, who was believed to be one of anger, wanted the death of his offenders. The new God does not need man's protection. God does not even need man to testify to His glory. All nature does that—"the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork." God does not need the secular courts to defend His dignity and His majesty. Nor it seems to me does a God of love desire those who blaspheme Him to be punished, for when they blaspheme, He realizes that they know not what they do and He forgives them.

Religion does not need courts to defend it. Religion is imperishable—built not on one book nor on one revelation, but built on man's puzzled cry before the universe, his lonesomeness in the valley of eternity. Religion lives and will live because man needs it to adjust himself to life and no philosophy can destroy it. And truly, I do not believe that words blaspheme the Deity—but rather deeds—injustice is blasphemy. Prejudice is blasphemy. War is blasphemy. Poverty is blasphemy. Persecution is blasphemy. Evil in life and deed and not in word is blasphemy. The God of to-day is pained not by words but by acts and as I look on the history of humanity, the greatest of blasphemies that I know of were committed by men dedicated to God, who though walking with psalms on their lips and symbols of God in their hands, kindled the faggots which burnt the heretical blasphemers. That was real blasphemy—men dedicated to love burning in the name of God a fellow human created in His image. And from such blasphemy may all of us be protected and saved.

Throughout the world the millions of Jews who rejoiced on April 1, 1925, who were thrilled by the thought of a great school of learning on the heights of Scopus, these irrespective of their personal views, want it to stand by truth and research.
